Photo editing software is expensive—but you can keep it to a minimum. Adobe PhotoShop, for example, is $375 for the entry-level Platinum version and $795 for the highest-end CC version. While it's not the cheapest photo editor available, the quality and variety of features are impressive for such a comprehensive application. And while Photoshop is the Photoshop it has been for years, it isn't the only image editor available. The same product as Adobe Photoshop has competitors like Paint Shop Pro and Elements. Each comes with many of the same basic features, plus some extras, and at almost half the price, is a superb value. Here are the main image editing features Photoshop offers and how to use them: Layer: Photoshop uses multiple layers to create complexity in an image. You can control the transparency of the different layers for ultimate clarity. Adjustments: Just as in other pieces of image-editing software, the adjustments tool enables you to customize the appearance of an image. Text: The text-editing tools enable you to create or modify text. Transform: This tool enables you to warp, skew, shear, and stretch your image. Batch Processing: Batch processing allows multiple images to be created or modified in a single operation. Adjustment Layers: If you are using layers with different settings, you can create an adjustment layer to quickly access these settings. Paths: You can create shapes, lines, and even text directly within Photoshop. Brushes: Photoshop includes a wide range of brushes to draw, paint, or simply add texture to images. Effects: These effects enable you to add special appearances or to create the look you want to your image. Animations: You can animate your images using any of the built-in features, but the full-featured version of Photoshop CC includes seven types of animations. You can create motion paths to create the movement in an image. Gestures: These allow you to apply editing directly to your images using your camera or computer. These tools enable you to add special settings to your images while keeping the original untouched. Smart Objects: Use the Smart Object function to keep your original image

Q: How to get coordinates of text on button click So I am trying to make a mini calculator that uses some javascript code to return the user's input into the input field. I have a button that says "Go!", and when you click on it I want to get the coordinates of the text on the button and then apply a CSS style to move the button over to the right spot. I am just not sure how to get the text coordinates from the button itself.

25.10.11 My pictures: 25.10.11 It was raining, lots of rain, and there were this two kids playing there in my way.... But then they suddenly stopped....and look at this flowers...how pretty... Did i surprised.... 25.10.11 I was in a bad mood, the morning was too hot and also i had no sleep at night, but it was so hard for me to stay at home that day, especially to see the kid crying there at bed. I could not do anything, i could not go out, and i was too sad. And then suddenly in my way, she was following me everywhere, playing with her sister, playing with her friends She was, so adorable and lovely, until she saw my face, she knows that she make me sad, she knows that she do it, i could not say anything she knows me too well, then she ask me "hey i not did that, what you feeling?", she look at my face, she saw that i never smile again, she look at my face for a while, and she leave her sister and friends, follow me. No.2: She used to call me "mommy", i used to love it, so cute, so sweet. When i am sad she will follow me and she will hold my hand, when i am mad she will get scared and start to cry and when i was happy she will be happy too, she is so cute, so lovely, i love her so much. No.1: She know me so well she will say "mommy, mommy", i used to hug her so tight, she used to hug me back, She called me "mommy" when she saw my sad face, she hug me so tight, she was always happy, and i was happy too, and i still am. They are my daughter, so cute, so lovely, i love them, i love them so much, i just can't stop it, they are my everything, i will never lost them no matter what, i will never let them away from me. HERE THEY ARE, THE CHILD WHO CHANGED ME LIFE, I LOVE YOU BABY, I LOVE YOU BABY, I LOVE
