To study the circadian change in the serum leptin and glucose and insulin concentrations in Japanese subjects. Leptin and insulin concentrations were measured in a blood sample obtained at 8:00 a.m. and 2:00 p.m. from 33 healthy normal-weight Japanese adults. In addition, basal blood glucose and serum leptin, insulin, and C-peptide concentrations were measured in the fasting state from 30 normal-weight, non-obese Japanese individuals. Fasting serum glucose and insulin concentrations measured at 8:00 a.m. were significantly higher than at 2:00 p.m. while fasting blood glucose and serum leptin concentrations did not change during the day. Serum C-peptide concentration was significantly higher at 8:00 a.m. than at 2:00 p.m. Fasting serum leptin and glucose concentrations did not change during the day, while fasting serum insulin concentrations did decrease at 8:00 a.m. compared with at 2:00 p.m. However, fasting serum insulin and C-peptide concentrations at 2:00 p.m. were still significantly higher than at 8:00 a.m. A significant positive correlation was observed between basal insulin and leptin concentrations ($r = 0.43$, P In vitro expansion of human keratinocytes from denuded donor site skin and donor site-matched cultured epidermis.
